

careful investigation of facts for future revision of the tariff. He read a resolution endorsing the commission, recently passed by the board of directors of the National Tariff Commission Association.

The President's special message, Mr. Wickham added, and recommended amendments to the interstate commerce laws, readjustment of mail rates and laws banks, uniform safety appliances on railroad trains, changes to make the employers' liability act more easy to enforce, intelligent conservation laws, readjustment of mail rates and revision of the customs laws. The President had placed before Congress for enactment into law, he declared, all those measures which the Republican party had pledged itself to adopt, and if Congress should adjourn without enacting them, then upon Congress, and not the President, would be the responsibility for the breach of faith.

Convinced of Success.
But Mr. Wickham expressed the conviction that the President's program would go through.

"I am firmly persuaded that these measures will not fail," he said, "and that despite the efforts of individuals to magnify their own particular importance at the expense of party loyalty and party honor, the Republican majority in Congress will make good the party pledges and give to the country the benefit of that legislation the party has promised and which the President has so clearly and so forcefully outlined."

Mr. Wickham referred to the prosecution of sugar frauds in New York, pointing to forty-eight convictions and only one acquittal by a jury, as well as the collection of more than three and a half million dollars in back duties by the government. In the Standard Oil and Tobacco cases in the Supreme Court of the United States, he referred to particularly, however, and declared they constituted the most comprehensive attempt ever made by the government to deal with the question of monopoly.

Great Issue Involved.
"In effect," declared the Attorney-General, with great emphasis on the word "effect," they involve the question whether or not the entire industries of this country may be legally controlled by one group of men.

"It is not to be inferred that it is the intention of the Republican party to put any check upon the natural and legitimate development of business enterprise either through individual or corporate organization."

"But it certainly has been its fixed purpose since the enactment of the Sherman law in 1890 to prevent the perversion of laws of corporate organization to incorporate stock holdings to the accomplishment of schemes of monopoly."

"It is not essential to American progress or American prosperity that one group of men shall control the entire business of the United States in oil, sugar, cotton, iron or any other commodity, and the principle of economic law is offended by striking down all such artificial combinations."

When he had finished reciting the administration's campaign against corruption, the Attorney-General said: "At these times, the government has a policy of the government to attack all special privileges and undue preferences, whether obtained by illegal combinations, by bribing public officials, by rebates or special advantages in transportation, or by any other method."

Plan for Harmony.
"It is now time that all those who call themselves Republicans should stop contending with the Democratic party, stop sinking their individual preferences into the legislative and executive machinery, and join with Republican leaders in carrying to fruition under our great, patient, candid, wise Republican President the work of clinching the reforms of the last eight years on the lines so carefully and so wisely laid down by the President."

"Wise legislation, embodying no sudden impulse, but matured views expressed in party councils, is pressed for enactment. When the account is cast and the people weigh them in the balance of reason and wisdom, who will find most favor? They who stand shoulder to shoulder with the President in carrying out the party pledges, or those who, true to no party principle, hovered like the bat in the twilight, sometimes with one sometimes with the other, and in the end was cast out and scorned by both?"

Judge Emory Speer, of Georgia, discussed the dimly receding line of separation between North and South, and Governor Adolph Ochs, of Minnesota, addressed himself to the subject of the "New North."

Tribute to Lee.
Judge Speer, in the toast "To the men who surrendered, and hence have carried the flag and kept the Union," the "Union," he referred to General Robert E. Lee, leader of the Confederate forces, who surrendered and praised in highest terms the liberal terms for the Confederates at Appomattox. He quoted historical data to show that from the closing days of the war to the present time, the South has been gradually dying out in all sections of the country.

After drawing a graphic picture of Lee presenting himself before the Union general, and the conference preceding the actual surrender, he described Lee's return to his troops to break the news.

"It has not been permitted to his countrymen to know the emotions in the lofty soul of the noble figure in gray, as he regarded for the last time that army of battered men and bright muskets, which, in the words of a Northern historian, 'Opposing a constant front to the mighty concentration of power, stood against it, vital in all its parts, died only with its annihilation.'"

"That his military career, brilliant and unstained from its inception, had ended, he clearly, he clearly, he clearly act of his life and especially that most critical and criticized, demonstrates that of all earthly considerations his personal fortunes were to him the least. He had declared that duty is the sublimest word in any language. And it can be made plain to any impartial mind that this loftiest type of American of the Southern States cast his lot with his native State and its subsequent allies from a sincere conviction of duty, as holy and unselfish as that of any martyr who, posted at the shrine of truth, had died in their defense."

Sincerity Not Questioned.
Referring to the announcement of placing a statue of Lee in Statuary Hall, and declaring that the sincerity of Southern men in their efforts to remove all traces of sectionalism can no longer be questioned, Judge Speer concluded:

"BERRY'S FOR CLOTHES."

Spring is blossoming in the blooming patterns of our new shirt stock.

Have you seen the diagonal patterned cuffs? They are here.

Have you seen a shirt with seventy tucks? It's here.

Have you seen percales printed in perfect imitation of the expensive jacquard? They are here.

Every novelty in shirt patterns is here, because our Resident Buyer in New York sends us the new things as soon as any Broadway store can supply them.

At a dollar here's a wide range of fancy negligees and a white plaited bosom shirt that's a wonder!

Then we go to $1.80, $2, up to $3.50.

A singularity of physique causes some men to have their shirts made-to-order; others prefer it that would have no difficulty in getting fitted in our ready-to-wear shirts.

Try us on that. You'll find nearly as many patterns from which to select in our custom department, and many of course are richer looking.

Deliveries made on Custom Shirts in 10 days.

Changing the subject—
Have you tried our Silk Lisle? The sock that outclasses the "guaranteed" kind.

You know we never charge for reliability, so your money pays for socks alone, and NOT for "insurance" against wear. Guaranteed to wear to your satisfaction is our way.

NEW DIAMOND IN BARTON HEIGHTS

The Barton Heights nine yesterday afternoon defeated the fast team from the John Marshall High School by a score of 10 to 4. The game marked the opening of the new ball grounds in Barton Heights, which are located on the Western portion of Battery Court.

An excellent diamond and playing field has been laid off and a large crowd of friends and rooters of both teams were present. Games will be played every Saturday throughout the summer with some of the fastest local teams.

Yesterday's game was well played. Several pretty plays were pulled off, and there was hard hitting on both sides. The John Marshall boys started in like winners, but Baldwin staid down after the first inning and pitched fine ball. On the other hand, Barton Heights began weak and finished strong. In the fourth inning they gave a pretty demonstration of the hit and run game, and scored six runs before the final man was retired.

Among the features was the double play by Rose and Davidson on a line fly to left. The High School boys played well with the exception of the fatal fourth. The final score was 10 to 4. The High School's star pitcher, Van Pelt, worked Friday and his place was taken by Gouldin, who was hit opportunely, but not often.

Barton Heights' next game will be on the 16th with Leigh Street Sunday School.

That his military career, brilliant and unstained from its inception, had ended, he clearly, he clearly, he clearly act of his life and especially that most critical and criticized, demonstrates that of all earthly considerations his personal fortunes were to him the least. He had declared that duty is the sublimest word in any language. And it can be made plain to any impartial mind that this loftiest type of American of the Southern States cast his lot with his native State and its subsequent allies from a sincere conviction of duty, as holy and unselfish as that of any martyr who, posted at the shrine of truth, had died in their defense."

Sincerity Not Questioned.
Referring to the announcement of placing a statue of Lee in Statuary Hall, and declaring that the sincerity of Southern men in their efforts to remove all traces of sectionalism can no longer be questioned, Judge Speer concluded:

"Nor can our country afford to depreciate or discredit in any manner warlike character or the military honor of the American States called Southern, and nothing could be more effective to a strong and fearless patriotism who have in the clearest way demonstrated their devotion to the flag, that any authoritative attempt to gully that Southern symbol, the Statuary sword of Lee, it would operate in every such State the salutary influence of the personal knowledge of the general purity, mainly President Lincoln, the tender mercies that has been done or attempted to cultivate fraternity between the States, only bringing discord and belligerency."

UNIFORM BANKING LAWS ARE NEEDED

This Is Object in View by National Monetary Commission.

Albany, N. Y., April 9.—In order to bring the American banking system into line with the drift of the world, greater flexibility and greater mobility in the banking reserves of the country is needed, as well as greater concentration in note issue privileges and greater coherence and system in the general control of the country's banking. This was the declaration made today by A. Platt Andrew, director of the mint, in an address before the South Carolina Bankers' Association on the work of the National Monetary Commission.

The commission has not yet begun to discuss even the general outlines of the recommendations which ultimately it will have to make to Congress, according to Mr. Andrew. No one to-day, he added, knows what that plan will be. He expressed his belief, however, that the material gathered by the commission, which will be available within the next few months, will constitute "an encyclopedia of banking without its equal" in the literature of any other country.

Comparison of Systems.
After drawing a picture of the banking systems of some of the European countries with that of America, Mr. Andrew declared he "entertained no illusion" that the same ends could be accomplished in this country by exactly the same means as in any other country.

"It was on account of the striking contrast between experiences here in America with conditions abroad," said Mr. Andrew, "that the National Monetary Commission, in undertaking its investigation, has made it a point of improving the credit arrangements of this country by examining the banking institutions, customs and regulations of the leading countries of Europe."

Mr. Andrew declared that "in none of the leading countries of Europe during the past 100 years, except in periods of war and revolution, has there been any such general collapse of credit and general suspension of the banks as occurred here only two years ago."

"I do not mean to imply," he continued, "that there has not been in these countries an unceasing alternation of trade activity and trade relaxation. Nor do I mean to imply that there have not been great failures of banks and business firms of all sorts. But upon all these occasions there has been leadership and the situation has been kept firmly in hand."

American Banking Methods.
Comparing the banking system of this country with those abroad, Mr. Andrew said:

"Not only are our banking reserves rendered less available in necessities times than are the banking reserves of other countries, because of the rigid requirement under our law of a proportion of cash, but our reserves are far less available than are the reserves in other countries, because they are scattered all over the country among our 25,000 different banking institutions."

"Institutions which in other countries are charged with the responsibility of handling the greater part of the balances of the banks," he added, "are not managed primarily for the private profit of the stockholders, and do not operate primarily to earn dividends, but are conducted with a more or less admitted responsibility for the maintenance of the common credit of the country."

"Another respect in which the drift of the world's banking is in a different direction from that of ours, and which concerns the matter of note issue, is the tendency of note issue regulation in other countries is manifestly toward their concentration in a single institution."

AMERICANS NOT POLITE
Washington One of Few Cities Exhibiting Courtesy.

Chicago, Ill., April 9.—Chicago does not lead in politeness to foreign guests, nor even attain rank with cities receiving honorable mention, according to Dr. J. Paul Godde, of the University of Chicago, who, as one of the three representatives of the Federal commission of Japan in its tour of the country last fall.

Dr. Godde gave an illustrated lecture on the tour and its significance at the art institute here. He spoke of the uniform courtesy exhibited by the Japanese commissioners toward American institutions and customs, contrasting it with the marked lack of politeness which he said was shown by their hosts, particularly during dinner speeches by their hosts.

"At Washington, Indianapolis and St. Louis," he said, "was real courtesy apparent. At Detroit American manners were abominable and at Philadelphia they were worse."

Congressman Clayton Weds.
Lexington, Ky., April 9.—Mrs. Bettie Davis was married today to Congressman D. H. Clayton of Alabama at the home of the bride in Georgetown. The wedding was attended by several of the representatives from the lower house of Congress. Congressman Clayton and his bride left tonight for Washington, and following the adjournment of Congress they will take a wedding trip abroad.

BLAKELEY NOT WORRIED

District Attorney Promises

"Something Doing" If He Doesn't Show Up.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

Pittsburg, Pa., April 9.—"If Hoffstot does not show up in Pittsburg by Monday and report to me, you can rest assured that there will be something doing."

This statement, made to-night by District Attorney William A. Blakeley, gave his position regarding Frank N. Hoffstot, president of the Pressed Steel Car Company, of this city, and a resident of New York, who has been caught in the present graft whirlpool which is sweeping through councils, banks and business circles, and bringing to light corruption in its worst form in places never before suspected.

"There is a report going the rounds that Hoffstot is missing from his New York haunts," continued Mr. Blakeley, "but you don't see me worrying in the least. I have had detectives on the job good and hard ever since the indictments were found, and they are still at it."

"A conference was held in this city this afternoon between Mr. Hoffstot's New York attorneys, who were thought by them to be a secret one, but detectives were also on the watch at the meeting. Nothing will get by now, as the defendants are in too deep to allow them any chance to slip through the web that has been woven. Let them report all they want, and Hoffstot is missing. I am not worried, but I give fair warning that it will be better for him to appear here Monday and take his medicine. If he doesn't," and Mr. Blakeley paused and shrugged his shoulders significantly, "well, I won't talk of that."

Keeping Close Tab.
Although he did not state it in so many words, the district attorney intimated that he had been keeping close tab on Hoffstot as well as on his attorneys, and that he could cause an arrest at any time, but that he preferred to allow the defendant time to show up in Pittsburg before taking any radical steps.

Max G. Leslie, county delinquent tax collector, the late king bee of the local political ring, who was also indicted, was said by his friends to be in Hot Springs, Ark., cooperating from his last trial, when he was acquitted on a charge of perjury in connection with the grafting, after a hard battle, but he was seen in the night, according to a well informed local authority.

A call at his Lawrenceville home proved that if he really is in the city he is keeping under cover, as the house appeared deserted. Repeated rings at the bell brought Mrs. Leslie, who refused to talk much. She denied that her husband was in the city and said that so far as she knew he was still in Hot Springs.

The district attorney says that the grand jury may conclude its investigations by next Tuesday, but that they are contingent on developments between now and Monday noon. If the investigation is completed by Tuesday the men listed for trial, some eight in all, for Wednesday, will be called promptly on the opening of court on that day.

Interest in the small fry, or the "351 and car fare" grafters, has been lost sight of as the net tightens around the men in higher up, and Monday's developments will probably make interesting reading.

LICENSES ARE DUE

Commissioner Hawkins Is Sending Warnings to Professional Men.

Commissioner of the Revenue O. A. Hawkins is issuing warnings to all professional men doing business in the city—lawyers, doctors and various other classes of specialized practitioners—that the city license is due. The license must be paid, due on or before April 1, but the law gives thirty days' time in which they may be paid. After that time there is a penalty of from $1 to $20 per day for each day's delay, and the Collector of Taxes under a new ordinance is required to report all offenders to the Police Court at once.
